b. Para 4h. requests information on evaluation of the FY 75 KIQ and NIO review of terrorist collection.
Response: The NIO review of terrorist collection under the KIQ has been quite limited.

25X1 KIQ [REDACTED] for FY 75 focused primarily on the acquisition of information necessary for the analysis of how terrorist organizations function. However, the community collection and production strategy which discussed implementation of this KIQ interpreted the requirements as primarily related to "--current and likely future performance of foreign terrorist groups --with those of highest priority being the fedayeen organizations currently active internationally and the Latin American groups active regionally," and the focus for collection was directed to "Current data -- required to support U.S. government programs designed to protect both U.S. and allied facilities and personnel from hostile acts by these groups and to support U.S. policymakers' efforts to resolve the international terrorist problem."

The KIQ for FY 77, which is now in the drafting stage, will reflect this strategy in the actual language of the KIQ and will emphasize the need for information on the plans of these organizations to attack or threaten U.S. persons and installations or to commit other terrorist acts inimical to U.S. interests. The need for information on the plans of these groups to seize, produce or threaten to use weapons of mass destruction and information on direct or indirect support to these groups by foreign governments will be retained in the new KIQ. This will more clearly define the concern which has made terrorism a key intelligence question.
